Continuing the Quest for Adolescent Literacy Acquisition

Adolescent Literacy Conference participants will...

It is clear that getting third graders to read at grade level is an important and challenging task and one that needs ongoing attention from researchers, teacher educators and parents. BUT, many excellent third graders will falter or fail in later academic tasks if the teaching of reading, writing, thinking and speaking is neglected in later elementary, middle and high school. (Snow, 2004)

Continuing the quest means...

- Provide ongoing professional development and support for all teachers
- Provide time in the day for students to read
- Provide intensive writing experiences and timely feedback
- Review available data to determine the state of literacy at your school
- Attend the Adolescent Literacy Conference at Marian College in Indianapolis, Indiana.
